

Sporran worn by Bonnie Prince Charlie

Sporran worn by Bonnie Prince Charlie Scottish National Memorials:

Printed by University Press GLasgow: 1888. The Bute Archive Mount Stuart.

This beautiful etching of a sporran worn by Prince Charles Edward Stuart is found in the catalogue from an exhibition of historical and personal relics.

The catalogue was purchased by the 3rd Marquess of Bute and added to his collection.

He was particularly interested in Scottish history and the history of the Stuart family and purchased both this and a pair of duelling pistols that belonged to Bonnie Prince Charlie, both of which can be seen in the catalogue.

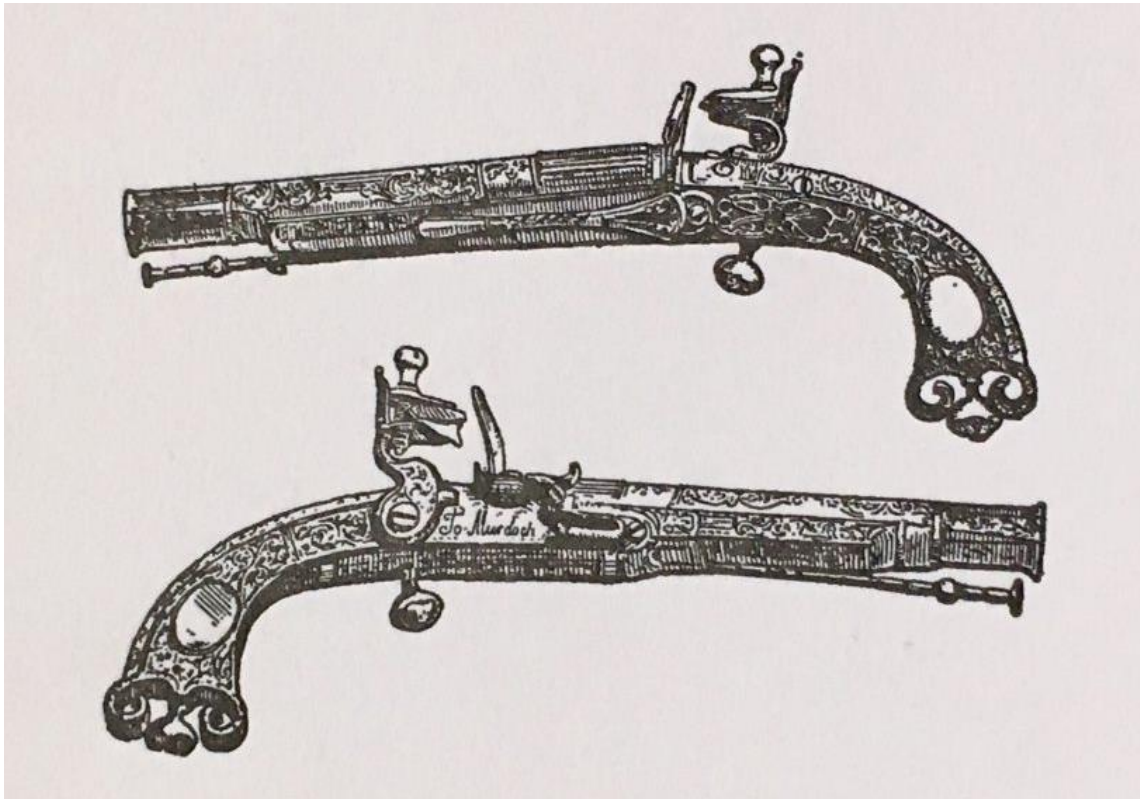

The Bute collection has several items related to the Jacobite rising of 1745.

Some of these include historical tracts and pamphlets and surviving personal correspondences of Bonnie Prince Charlie, later obtained by the Bute Family.

FIG. 105.—PRINCE CHARLES'S SPORRAN.

Pair of Duelling Pistols belonging to Bonnie Prince Charlie

Pair of Duelling Pistols belonging to Bonnie Prince Charlie.

These beautiful etchings of Prince Charles Edward Stuart's Duelling Pistols are found in the catalogue from an exhibition of historical and personal relics.

The catalogue was purchased by the 3rd Marquess of Bute and added to his collection.

He was particularly interested in Scottish history and the history of the Stuart family and purchased both these and a sporran that belonged to Bonnie Prince Charlie items seen in the catalogue.

The Bute collection has several items related to the Jacobite rising of 1745.

